

- About the author

- Disclaimer

- Table of Contents

- Table of tables

- EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

- Introduction
- The evolution of vegetarianization
- Case studies of companies in the meat-free products market
- In place of meat: evaluating meat-free product strategies
- Barriers and opportunities in vegetarianization strategies
- The future of vegetarianization strategies

- Introduction

- Summary
- Introduction
 - Who is this report for and what is it about?
- Defining vegetarianization
 - Categories of meat-free, restrained meat-eating, and meat-eating consumers
 - The target consumer groups for vegetarianization strategies

- The evolution of vegetarianization

- Summary
- Introduction
- Meat consumption is changing
- Meat-free and restrained meat-eating consumers
 - Meat-free consumers
 - Restrained meat-eating consumers
 - Meat-free and restrained meat eating: the effects of gender, ethnicity, age, and income
- Drivers of vegetarianization
 - Drivers: Health and wellness concerns
 - Drivers: Ethical concerns
 - Drivers: Food safety
 - Drivers: International and national food policy
 - Drivers: The cost of meat
- What the evolution of vegetarianization means

- Case studies of companies in the meat-free products market

- Summary
- Introduction
- Amy's Kitchen
- Boca Foods Company
- Redwood Wholefood Company
- Marlow Foods Ltd

- Quorn
 - Cauldron
- Hain Celestial Group
 - Linda McCartney Foods
 - Yves Veggie Cuisine Inc.
- StarLite Cuisine Inc.
- KK Fine Foods PLC
- Evidence the vegetarianization trend is expanding in out of home market
- Implications of vegetarianization for developing the market for meat-free foods
- In place of meat: evaluating meat-free product strategies
 - Summary
 - Introduction
 - In place of meat
 - Sources of protein for vegetarians and restrained meat-eaters
 - Categories of meat replacement products
 - Adding value to meat-free products: specifying technical, functional, and emotional benefits
 - Meat alternatives
 - Goodlife Fairtrade Nut Cutlet
 - Amy's Kitchen Broccoli and Cheddar Bake Bowl
 - Innocent Veg Pots
 - UK supermarket own-label meat alternatives
 - Strategies in meat alternative meat-free products
 - Faux meat
 - Fry Group Foods Louisiana Tenders
 - Tivall Frankfurters
 - Morningstar Farms Meal Starter Veggie Meatballs
 - Garden of Eatin' International Gardein Ultimate Beefless Burger
 - Turtle Island Foods, Inc. Gourmet Sausages
 - UK supermarket own-label faux meat products
 - Strategies in faux meat meat-free products
 - Comparing strategies in meat alternative and faux meat products
- Barriers and opportunities in vegetarianization strategies
 - Summary
 - Introduction
 - The resilience of meat-centered meal cultures
 - Barriers
 - Opportunities
 - Faux meat products: natural or processed food?
 - Supertex
 - Quorn

- Consumer satisfaction with meat-free products
 - Vitamins and minerals
 - Meat-free product availability in supermarkets
 - Eating out meat-free
- Implications for vegetarianization in a developing market

• The future of vegetarianization strategies

- Summary
- Introduction
- Vegetarianization: a maturing trend
- Vegetarianization: opportunities and challenges for companies
- Future developments in vegetarianization
- The next generation of meat-free products
 - Ingredients
 - Technologies: making “meat”
 - Implications for vegetarianization

• Appendix

- Methodology
- Definitions and abbreviations
- References

• TABLES

- Table: Meat Consumption, US and EU-27 1 , 2009 & 2010 2 , 1000s of metric tons 3
- Table: Meat consumption per capita, selected countries, 2007, kg per person
- Table: Prevalence of vegetarian consumers, per cent of the adult population, selected countries
- Table: Protein values of selected foods

• FIGURES

- Figure: Types of meat-free, restrained meat-eating and meat-eating consumers
- Figure: Demographic profiles for meat-free and restrained meat-eating consumers
- Figure: Drivers of vegetarianization
- Figure: Key motivations for vegetarianized diets: health and ethics
- Figure: A driver of vegetarianization in the US: the Meatless Monday campaign
- Figure: A driver of vegetarianization in the UK: the Meat Free Monday campaign
- Figure: The rising cost of ethically and sustainably produced meat: boutique butchers in Los Angeles, US.
- Figure: Eataly’s vegetable butcher is a sign of vegetarianization
- Figure: Amy’s Kitchen’s primary claim is “healthy eating”
- Figure: Amy’s Kitchen’s hand made manufacturing processes boost healthy and natural claims
- Figure: Boca Food Company products are marketed to restrained meat eaters
- Figure: BOCA meatless products are directly compared to meat equivalents to boost health claims
- Figure: Redwood Wholefood’s products are marketed as vegan

- Figure: Redwood's™ vegan products are also marketed as "free from" dairy
- Figure: Marlow Food's™ Quorn is a leading meat-free brand in the UK and the US
- Figure: Quorn Sausages & Mash appeals to restrained meat-eaters
- Figure: Marlow Food's™ Cauldron brand is the leading tofu brand in the UK
- Figure: Linda McCartney Foods is a prominent supporter of the Meat Free Monday campaign in the UK
- Figure: Yves Veggie Cuisine products are marketed to appeal to health vegetarians
- Figure: US-based start-up manufacturer StarLite Cuisine has 2 vegan product lines
- Figure: KK Fine Foods supplies gourmet meat-free products to the UK foodservices sector: Cajun Vegetable Grill
- Figure: Meat-free products in place of meat: their appeal to health and ethical vegetarians
- Figure: Specifying the technical, functional, and emotional value-added benefits of meat-free products
- Figure: Goodlife Fairtrade Nut Cutlet is a meat alternative product marketed as naturally, healthily and ethically "good for you"
- Figure: Amy's™ Kitchen Bowls product line is a meat-free alternative to meat product with value-adds of organic, gluten free, and handmade
- Figure: Innocent's™ Veg Pot offer vegetable dense meat-free ready meals with exotic and gourmet benefits
- Figure: Tesco's™ Meat Free Chick Pea & Barley Gumbo offers exotic and gourmet benefits
- Figure: Fry Group Foods's™ recent NPD in frozen faux meat products
- Figure: Tivall's™ Frankfurter-style sausages are marketed as faux meat to appeal to health vegetarians
- Figure: Technical and functional benefits of Morningstar Farms Meal Starter Veggie Meatballs
- Figure: Gardein Ultimate Beefless Burger is marketed for "meat and veggie lovers alike" and as containing 65% less fat than its meat equivalent
- Figure: Turtle Island Foods, Inc. Gourmet Sausages: faux meat that can be barbeque grilled
- Figure: Benefits strategies in meat alternative and faux meat products
- Figure: Cauldron Foods Marinated Tofu Pieces offers the benefit of being part-prepared
- Figure: LightlifeFoods rely upon the resilience of meat-centered meal cultures to market its Smart Bacon meat-free bacon-style strips
- Figure: The manufacturing process of Quorn faux meat meat-free products
- Figure: Sol Cuisine's™ Organic BBQ Tofu Ribs mineral content is flagged on packaging
- Figure: Barriers and opportunities for meat-free products
- Figure: Remis Algae manufacturers a range of meat-free products from algae
- Figure: QV Foods Naturally Best NPD uses oats, a key future ingredient in meat replacement products
- Figure: Fresh's™ mushrooms have developed a meat replacement product using mushrooms
- Figure: The process of growing "meat" in laboratories
- Figure: De Vegetarische Slager: the vegetarian butcher selling faux meat products